TEXAS 85th Legislature wraps up work in Austin, adjourns Sine Die

State lawmakers concluded Texas' 85th Regular Legislative Session on Monday, May 29, ending a session that has been filled at times with tension, and frustration. Nonetheless, Speaker of the Texas House Joe Straus labeled this session as a productive one, commenting, "Members from both parties and across the state came to Austin and got things done for their constituents. Members had the chance to deliver results on the issues that really matter to their communities. The House feels very good about where we ended up, and now we look forward to returning home and visiting with our constituents about the work of this year's session." Lieutenant Governor Dan Patrick also extended praise to the Senate for the upper-chamber's hard work this session, saying, "I am very proud of what we were able to accomplish in the 140 days of this legislative session."

As members of the state legislature wrapped up their work in Austin, Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) Chairman Christi Craddick expressed her appreciation to state lawmakers for agreeing this session to increase funding for the state's primary oil and gas regulatory agency. For the 2018-19 Biennium, the RRC will receive funding to support additional staff inspectors and IT program upgrades. "During this time of incredible growth within the Texas oil and gas industry, it is critical that the RRC has the funds necessary to continue to regulate such a dynamic and foundational segment of our state's economy," Chairman Craddick said. "Oil and gas production generates billions of dollars in revenue for the state, providing funding for critical services in our communities and opportunities supporting our state's bright future. Our state's energy success is driven not only by Texas' vast mineral wealth, but by the regulatory leadership of the RRC. We at the commission are proud of the work we do to ensure the protection of all Texans and our environment while allowing the energy industry to safely innovate and thrive." The RRC also enjoyed other legislative successes this year, with the passage of House Bill 1818, for instance, that continues the agency until 2029.

With regard to some of the other issues TIPRO worked on during the final days of session, a brief update can be found below.

- HB 1643 by Springer/Seliger was passed, relating to the prosecution of the criminal offense of operation of an unmanned aircraft over certain facilities. After accepting an amendment to this bill, the legislature sent HB 1643 to the governor on May 30, 2017.
- HB 2377 by Larson/Perry, relating to the development of brackish groundwater, also was successfully passed by the legislature. The bill was sent to the governor on May 30, 2017.
- SB 26 by Estes/Landgraf the Texas Emissions Reduction Plan reform bill died on the House floor last week but was amended in the Senate to SB 1731 by Birdwell/Meyer. A substantial amount of SB 26 was added to the bill and approved in the conference committee report. SB 1731 was sent to the governor on May 30.

It is still possible that Governor Greg Abbott could call a special legislative session. During a special session, lawmakers only can take up legislative proposals related to the governor's agenda.

VERY LARGE CRUDE CARRIER DOCKS AT OXY INGLESIDE ENERGY CENTER IN PORT CORPUS CHRISTI

Measuring the length of nearly four football fields, the largest oil tanker ever to call on a port in the Gulf of Mexico safely docked on Friday, May 26th at the Oxy Ingleside Energy Center in the Port of Corpus Christi. The ship, classified as a Very Large Crude Carrier (VLCC), is a massive 1,093-foot-long vessel capable of holding over 2 million barrels of oil.

Vicki Hollub, president and chief executive officer of Occidental Petroleum, said, "We believe the Oxy Ingleside Energy Center is the premier crude oil export terminal in the United States. Permian Basin crude is being exported Asia, Europe and elsewhere around the world, and Occidental's export facility is well positioned to serve the Permian, which is the largest and fastest-growing basin in the U.S." Hollub, a former TIPRO board member, added, "The arrival of the VLCC at our terminal continues to build on our position as the Permian's largest oil producer, enabling us to load the largest ships with our crude and the crude of other producers."

President's Message

TIPRO Members.

This past Monday, May 29, the Texas 85th Legislature adjourned Sine Die, bringing the state's 2017 regular legislative session to a close. This year's legislative session certainly had no shortage of drama at the capitol, though I'm happy to report the successful passage of many bills important to TIPRO members and our industry. Just last week, Texas Governor Greg Abbott signed House Bill 1818, TIPRO's highest priority this legislative session, providing for the continuation of the Railroad Commission of Texas for the next 12 years. Known as the Railroad Commission Sunset bill, this piece of legislation will provide regulatory certainty for the Texas oil and gas industry as well as further strengthen oversight of energy development in the Lone Star State. The leadership of Governor Abbott, the Texas Legislature and the Railroad Commission on House Bill 1818 once again illustrates how state regulators and policymakers are best equipped to adopt sensible, yet progressive regulations for the protection of the environment, the benefit of Texas citizens, and the responsible development of oil and natural gas resources.

During the 2017 legislative session, the state budget was also of primary concern, as lawmakers debated over whether to withdraw revenue from Texas' Economic Stabilization Fund, otherwise known as the Rainy Day Fund. After two very unique proposals passed in each chamber, state leaders eventually resolved different Day Fund. After two very unique proposals passed in each chamber, state leaders eventually resolved differences over Senate Bill 1, the state's appropriations bill, and over the weekend signed the final paperwork to finance a responsible state budget for the next two years. TIPRO worked hard this session to ensure that the legislature not only pass a budget that will meet the state's essential needs, but also appropriate the proper funds for our state regulatory agencies, including the Railroad Commission. Ultimately, legislators agreed to allocate $128.3 million to the Railroad Commission for Fiscal Year 2018, and $88.1 million for Fiscal Year 2019. For comparison, last session, $79.7 million in funding was allocated to the commission for Fiscal Year 2016, and $78.8 million provided to the Railroad Commission for Fiscal Year 2017.

The 85th Texas Legislature also passed other critical bills relating to the TexNet seismic monitoring program, new limitations for operating unmanned aircraft (such as drones) over certain facilities like oil and gas well pads, and the establishment of a new offense under Chapter 31 of the state Penal Code for the theft of petroleum products or oil and gas equipment. TIPRO also was pleased that the Texas Legislature passed Senate Concurrent Resolution 26, which urges Congress to review federal regulations on the oil and gas industry. As members of our association are well aware, during the past eight years, the federal government continuously promulgated regulations that threatened the success of the Texas oil and gas industry, the jobs we create, and the revenue streams we supply to the state. As detailed under SCR 26, with a new administration now in place in Washington, D.C., there is a unique opportunity for Texas to work with the leadership of the federal government to transcend partisan politics and correct misuses of federal regulatory power by identifying onerous federal regulations finalized in the last eight years that should be revised, delegated to state agencies, or eliminated in order to ease the overly burdensome regulatory patchwork on the oil and gas industry in Texas.

In the coming days, TIPRO will publish our association's End-of-Session State Legislative Report, which will provide a comprehensive summary on the outcome this session of legislation of significance to independent producers and royalty owners in the state of Texas.

Many thanks you to our excellent TIPRO staff, engaged members and partners for their work this year. For 71 years, and 36 Texas legislative sessions, TIPRO has remained committed to effectively advocating for our members and industry. Thank you for your continued support.

Regards, Ed Longanecker

OPEC AGREES TO EXTEND PRODUCTION CUTS UNTIL 2018

Leaders of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have decided to extend cuts to the group's oil production output by another nine months, in hopes of alleviating pressures on oil prices from the oversupplied market. OPEC delegates made the announcement after meeting in Vienna, Austria, on Thursday, May 25, 2017. OPEC initially instated limits to its production starting in January, though the original deal was due to end this summer in June. Now, OPEC members say they've agreed to continue to cut the cartel's total output in attempts to push oil prices back up.

IN NEW OP-ED, TEXAS ENERGY REGULATOR LOOKS AT AMERICA'S INFLUENCE ON OPEC

In a new editorial, Texas Railroad Commissioner Ryan Sitton talks about how the U.S. oil and gas industry has been able to disrupt the once almighty influence of the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) on global oil markets. "We watched [last] Thursday as the advances of the shale producers in Texas and the U.S. forced the hand of the OPEC nations -- and they extended cuts to support prices," wrote the commissioner in the op-ed published over the weekend.

"America's energy exports have increased 334 percent in just the last 10 years, and our energy is being used to lessen the influence of Russia in Europe and provide cleaner burning energy for countries like China, South Korea, Mexico, Jordan, Pakistan, Turkey, Dominican Republic, Thailand, Kuwait and Chile. For all of the political posturing around energy, the market forces in the United States are competing head to head with the conglomerate forces in the rest of the world. The days of OPEC using oil supplies and prices as a political weapon are dwindling. More specifically, while they still have the ability to push prices down, they are losing the ability to push them up... Less OPEC oil on the market enhances the opportunity for American energy to fill needs around the world and will help us achieve energy dominance, which means producing more energy than anyone else and using that energy to enhance our economic and national security."

CONGRESSMAN PETE OLSON AND EPA ADMINISTRATOR PRUITT REVIEW ISSUES FACING TEXAS

Continuing his outreach to state leaders and elected officials, Scott Pruitt, head of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) met in May with Texas Congressman Pete Olson (TX-22) to discuss issues impacting Texas' environment and economy. "Congressman Olson understands how important it is for the EPA to work with municipalities and states to help them reach compliance under the Clean Air Act," said Administrator Scott Pruitt.

"Improving air and water quality while growing our economy is critical in a city like Houston that has vibrant communities alongside our nation's energy and petrochemical powerhouse," Representative Olson said. "Administrator Pruitt understands this, and as a former state regulator he also understands the importance of the federal government working with our states and local communities on issues like ozone. I look forward to working with him as he charts a new, constructive path forward at the EPA."

Administrator Pruitt also recently met on Capitol Hill with Texas Congressman Mike Conaway (TX-11) to review environmental and economic issues important to both the people of the state of Texas and the nation.

EPA ISSUES 90-DAY STAY FOR OIL AND GAS EMISSION STANDARDS

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced at the end of May that it will issue a stay for portions of the 2016 New Source Performance Standards (NSPS) for the oil and natural gas industry.

The EPA's NSPS rule, finalized last June, adopted new standards for greenhouse gas emissions and volatile organic compound (VOC) emissions from the oil and natural gas sector, addressing fugitive emissions at well sites and compressor station sites, as well as emissions from pneumatic pumps.

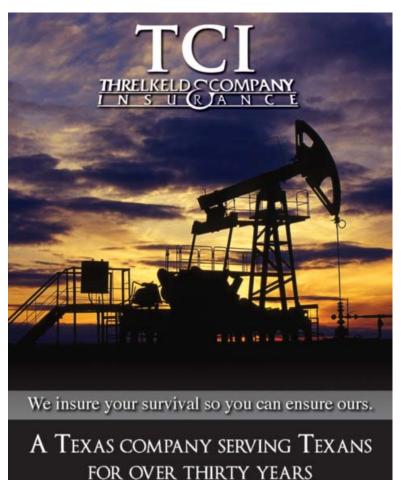

A number of stakeholders - including members of the oil and gas industry - later submitted administrative petitions to EPA officials expressing concerns over technical aspects of the policy, and requesting the agency reevaluate parts of its 2016 Rule.

In response to the petitions, the EPA in April revealed its intent to reconsider provisions of the rule, including the fugitive emissions monitoring requirements, pursuant to section 307(d)(7)(B) of the Clean Air Act (CAA).

Now, the EPA is formally following through with its commitment by issuing a notice in the Federal Register of a three-month stay of the fugitive emissions, pneumatic pumps, and professional engineer certification requirements under the rule.

While the 90-day stay is in effect, parties do not have to comply with the respective regulatory requirements that are under review by the EPA.
